

Urban Building Projects Ltd recently helped out former Warrington Wolves flyer, Mark Forster, as he embarked on a dream trip to play rugby sevens in Dubai.

Foz, who has been working for the company this year, once sped down the wing at Wilderspool, during a career that spanned 20 seasons and saw him score 191 tries in 458 appearances.

Urban helped pave the way for the current Bank Quay amateur to take his place as a Player Coach in a BARLA Legends team, after contributing to his sponsorship.

The amateur legends did well in the Emirates Airline Dubai Sevens. Indeed they were only knocked at the quarter final stage by a team of ex Super League professional stars, who were representing the Joining Jack charity.

In a bruising encounter that saw current Wolves prop Adrian Morley sin-binned, it was another ex Wire who proved to be the difference, with Steve Blakeley notching two tries in a 15-5 victory.

Commenting on the trip, Forster, said: "I was really happy that Urban were able to sponsor me, as without their support, it would have been impossible to make this kind of appearance as an amateur."

Adding, "The event was a brilliant experience and was a chance to come up against some very familiar faces from my previous professional career."

Nicky Palmer, Urban's Office Manager, said: "We were delighted to help out Foz on this great trip and it was also pleasing to hear that the Joining Jack team did particularly well, raising a lot of money for that worthwhile cause."
