

An exciting project for both Urban and Heathfield Nursing Home, recently reached completion, as a new development was unveiled.

Urban have been working at the home in Grappenhall, as part of a period of phased development, which has seen huge transformations to an existing part of the building.

The project saw Urban take charge of the home's existing dining room. From here an old chimney breast that spanned two floors was removed and in turn a brand new sun room was created. Elsewhere an older lounge area was also converted into a modern en-suite bedroom.

To mark the completion of the project, Urban presented Heathfields with a commemorative plaque and The Mayor of Warrington, Steve Wright, was on hand to officially open the new development.

Commenting on the project, Nicky Palmer, Urban's Office Manager, said: "The Heathfields development was a great one for Urban to be involved with. The feedback we have received from the home has been very complementary."

Adding: "We are sure that the new sun room will be of great benefit to the current residents."
